When seconds count, what can you do for someone who needs your help?
Here are 4 reasons why you should choose WMA course.

Point 01 Practical field application and hands on practice

This is the best and most comprehensive course of its kind offering relevant and realistic first-aid training in the wilderness context. More than 60% of the lecture will be held outside the classroom. You will practice hands on to master patient assessment skills, field treatment and wilderness protocols.

Point 02 Professional instructor and English materials

All WMA instructors are medical and outdoor professionals who actively work in remote settings. They are also experienced educators for healthcare in difficult conditions. The fully qualified Japanese instructor who leads instructs courses in Canada and U.S. will lead this English course in Japan.

Point 03 Disaster and outdoor emergency specialized course

This is far from the ordinary CPR course. It addresses the specific needs of field personnel who work in outdoor guiding, field education, and disaster care, where resources may be less than adequate, and evacuation to a hospital is hours away. You will learn how to prepare, assess and treat injuries and illnesses in harsh situations.

Point 04 Internationally acknowledged certificate and training

Wilderness Medical Associates has been the global leader in wilderness and remote medicine since 1980. As a result, the certifications we grant are instantly recognized in even the most remote corners of the world. We annually certify more than 10,000 students in over 30 different countries.
